This book reviews recent trends and developments in the study of the impact that the environment has on human reproduction. It thoroughly examines these issues using the most modern techniques and methods available to analyze the manner in which both male and female fertility can be affected and assessed. Coverage examines such diverse factors as toxic environmental contaminants, air pollution, and exposure to medical drugs. From the Back Cover: The link between reproductive health and the environment has been strengthened by the findings of recent studies. It is becoming increasingly important to link results and data from such studies into a model that aids in the explanation of p
